

ANCHORAGE MUSEUM

ARCTIC STUDIES CENTER

 Smithsonian Institution

Smithsonian Spotlight: Thursday March 6 at 7 p.m.

Photo by Loren Holmes

DREW MICHAEL

Location: Anchorage Museum auditorium. Free

Yup'ik/Iñupiaq artist Drew Michael blurs the lines between traditional and contemporary art. He blends Alaska Native traditions and modern design in his provocative masks and carvings, incorporating everything from wood and baleen to candlewax and Barbie dolls. He discusses his work and upcoming projects.

This event is sponsored by the Recovering Voices Program, an initiative led by the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History. For more information, go to <http://recoveringvoices.si.edu>.